About This Catalog

Each year Berkeley Social Welfare administers or directly awards approximately two million dollars in support to graduate students. At Berkeley, 90% of all graduate students receive some form of financial support.

This Catalog outlines funding opportunities and programs anticipated to be in effect and available to Berkeley Social Welfare graduate students for the 2015-2016 academic year. The types of financial support programs, award amounts, and the total number of awards available vary from year to year, and are dependent on the availability of funds. Information included in this Catalog is subject to change as award programs and/or available award amounts change.

Cal-Child Welfare (Cal-CWLT) Leadership Training Program
The Cal-CWLT initiative prepares MSW students for leadership in child welfare practice post-graduation. Students participate in the second year of the MSW program, and receive an annual stipend of $19,110 for one year. Select Social Welfare doctoral students may also be eligible to participate and receive the stipend as funding permits. There is a contractual, one-year child welfare employment requirement post-graduation.
Applications are distributed in fall each year, for the following academic year.

Integrated Behavioral Health with Children, Adolescents, and Young Adults Training Program
This stipend-based training program supports second year field placements for MSW students who, following their training, will focus on children, adolescents, and transitional-age youth at risk for developing or who have developed a recognized behavioral health disorder. Selected participants receive a $10,000 stipend in the second year of the MSW program, in exchange for a commitment to participate in IBH-related training and evaluation activities, and to make good faith efforts to look for employment in child, adolescent, and young adult behavioral health services upon degree conferral. Applications are distributed in early spring each year, for stipend awards in the following academic year.

2015-16 Anticipated Awards Available: 15

Title IV-E Child Welfare Training Program
This stipend-based training program prepares up to 20 MSW students each year for careers in public child welfare services. Students complete a specialized curriculum that includes two years of field placement in either a county child welfare unit or a closely related agency serving child welfare clients. Trainees receive an annual stipend of $18,500 for two academic years in exchange for a post-graduation work commitment of least two years in a county welfare service agency.

Information is provided to applicants as part of the admissions process, and interested students select this option at the time of application to the MSW program.

Funding Opportunities for Doctoral Students

Fellowships for Entering Students
All newly admitted doctoral students are considered by the Doctoral Admissions Committee for nomination for Doctoral Multi-Year Fellowships awarded by the Graduate Division. These fellowships include a stipend ranging from $18,000 - $28,500, plus tuition and fees, for the first two academic years. Berkeley Social Welfare then provides departmental support, generally in the form of academic student employment and/or fellowships, for an additional two years contingent upon satisfactory academic progress. Applicants are considered for nomination for these highly competitive Fellowships at the time of admission to the doctoral program.

The Doctoral Completion Fellowship (DCF)
This Fellowship administered by the Graduate Division is an incentive award offered to PhD students for completing their degrees with a reasonable time. Eligible students may activate the fellowship at any time after their advancement to candidacy, through the end of the year Normative Time to Degree (NTD) plus one year. NTD is currently 10 semesters or five years for the Social Welfare PhD.

For more information about this award please see http://grad.berkeley.edu/policy/degrees-policy/#f31-deans-normative-time-fellowship-dntf-and-doctoral-completion-fellowship-DCF

Must be U.S. citizens or permanent residents whose backgrounds, life experiences, and/or work contribute to diversity. The fellowship includes a living stipend of $20,500, payment of fees, and a travel allowance. The Graduate Division requests nominations from departments in the Spring semester.

Extramural Funding Opportunities

Extramural awards are made from a variety of outside funding sources, including government agencies; professional and alumni organizations; private foundations; and corporations. Many Berkeley Social Welfare students have been successful at securing extramural funding through additional university, public, and privately-sponsored fellowships. We actively encourage all graduate students to apply for extramural funding, particularly doctoral students seeking dissertation support.

The process of identifying, researching and applying for external fellowships and awards can be lengthy and time-consuming. Begin your search as early as possible, preferably at least one year before expected enrollment. Following is a partial list of major extramural funding resources, and awards that have been previously given to Berkeley Social Welfare students.

Federal Student Loan Programs

Federal Student Loan Programs provide the major source of need-based financial aid funding for graduate professional degree students, and most graduate students easily qualify for federal aid. Berkeley participates in the Federal Direct Student Loan and Work-Study Programs, which are administered by the Financial Aid and Scholarships Office:
http://financialaid.berkeley.edu/.

To apply for financial assistance:
Eligibility is based entirely on demonstrated financial need, and requires filling the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), which is available at www.fafsa.ed.gov.

Berkeley’s FAFSA school code is 001312.

The priority deadline to file a FAFSA is usually March 1 for the upcoming academic year – but even if you miss the priority deadline, you should still complete the FAFSA. To be considered for university or departmental funding, you should file the FAFSA even if you are not sure you will need or want any aid from the Financial Aid Office - you can decide later. The University must have your FAFSA for the current academic year on file in order to award you any type of fellowship.

Short-Term Emergency Loans

The Financial Aid and Scholarships Office offers short-term, interest-free emergency loans designed to help students meet unanticipated expenses directly related to the cost of education. For amounts, dates of availability, and how to apply, please see http://financialaid.berkeley.edu/short-term-emergency-loan.
Funding Matrix

Funding opportunities are listed by alphabetical order. Eligibility is noted based on concentration and program.
