

BERKELEY SOCIAL WELFARE
UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA

TEACHING PROFESSOR POSITION

The School of Social Welfare at the University of California, Berkeley invites applications for one Teaching Professor (also known as Lecturer with the Potential for Security of Employment) position, with a specialty in child mental health. The expected start date is July 1, 2021. Rank will be determined based on qualifications and experience. The initial appointment will be for one or two years, with the potential for security of employment after approximately 6 years, depending on the step at hire. Security of employment is the equivalent of tenure, and includes membership in the Academic Senate.

We seek an individual who has:

- a demonstrated track record of excellent teaching and supervision/mentorship—especially as it relates to building multi-level skills for social work practice
- substantial experience in social work practice with expertise in one of the following areas: child mental health, evidence-informed intervention strategies, field education, or integration of theory, research, and practice
- leadership skills relevant to bridging social work field education with classroom-based instruction
- a commitment to multi-level practice
- an established or promising track record of collegial teamwork and university citizenship needed for a range of leadership roles and service duties in a public institution.

The School of Social Welfare is committed to building an excellent, diverse faculty, staff, and student body, and to creating an inclusive environment that is supportive of all individuals. We welcome applicants whose experiences have prepared them to contribute to this commitment. How do we assess your contributions to diversity, equity and inclusion? Please see our guidelines here: <https://ofew.berkeley.edu/recruitment/contributions-diversity/support-faculty-candidates>
